

Summary

Fine weather once again – we have been lucky at recent work parties. Now we are into the bird nesting season, we were somewhat restricted in what we could do, so we had a fairly short work party doing some odds and ends. Rod busied himself with tending to whips again, mainly in the vicinity of the central path. Chrissie and Phil treated the ladder boards again with linseed oil. The rest of us used fallen branches near the eastern path to mark the edges of the path, particularly near the party area towards the north-east corner. As usual there was plenty of litter to bring down, including some bottles.
